Plain Duty of Business Men

Chamber of Commerce Discusses
Lack of Patriotism in Certain Quarters of City

The meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night developed a rather lively discussion on the relation of business interests to the chamber. It was openly asserted that there are business men in the city who make it a rule never to subscribe to public enterprises, leaving the task of upholding the dignity of the community to the patriotic few who place the interests of Astoria and Clatsop county first and the rest of the world afterwards.

The discussion was precipitated on the consideration of a question involving the moral responsibility of the chamber to assume a liability contracted by the joint committee on manufactures. The amount of the debt to be borne by the chamber is $214,500, and the members of the committee on manufactures and industries are equally personally responsible for the amount on a note held by one of the banks. The question that arose was as to the method of liquidating the indebtedness some being in favor of pledging the chamber by resolution to pay $20 per month, and the majority favoring no special method, believing that the assumption of the liability is sufficient assurance that it will be paid as quickly as the finances of the chamber admit. The latter opinion prevailed and was unanimously adopted, and subsequently a motion was passed providing for a committee of five to go among the business men and solicit the amount. The subscription list was opened at the meeting and the sum of $52 was raised. J. E. Grake sounded a note of warning to the chamber against appealing to the people for cash subscriptions too often. "I think we have reached high noon in this matter," he said, "and I think a halt should be called." G. W. Lounsbury did not think public spirit was dead in Astoria, and suggested that another appeal be made to the business men, beginning right in the chamber.

The proposition to re-establish the harbor lines submitted to the chamber by R. B. Dyer, of the Clatsop Mill Co., in order to enable the several mills to engage in deep water shipping, was referred to the committee on navigation. It was pointed out that this would enable the new Hume mill to ship the product from its inception.

The report of the special Fourth of July committee was filed, and general routine business closed the meeting.

TILLAMOOK VS ASTORIA.

Secretary West of the Regatta committee has received a challenge from the Tillamook base ball team to be transmitted to the Astoria team, to play during regatta week. As the Tillamookers particularly specified that they wanted to play with only the pick of the city, they evidently intend to wage a stiff contest. The local team has the matter under advisement and Mr. West has written the challengers telling them that doubtless a game will be arranged to their satisfaction.

Astoria Even With Cathlamet

Local Team Wallops Hosts On the Lower Columbia By Score of 10 to 6.

A side incident of the Forester's excursion to Cathlamet last Sunday, and one that made the Cathlamet base ball fans sidestep and wince, was the walloping administered by the boys in gray from Astoria who took their rivals in camp to the tune of ten runs to six. It was a fitting return of the little encounter in Astoria some time ago, when the Cathlamet boys returned home with four to six emblazoned on their diamond escutcheon.

While the game on Sunday was far from being errorless, it was none-the-less exciting. The locals succeeded in retiring the side with no more than a total of six runs scored against them.

Astoria lined up as follows:
Abercrombie, 1st b;
Graham, 2nd b;
Grant, 3rd b;
Reagan, ss;
Knutson, 1 f;
Trullinger, c f;
Mitchell, r f;
Ross, p; Stockton, c.

The game was the best exhibition given on the lower Columbia for three years. More than 6000 fans of the 23d degree were present.

Astoria went to bat first and in the initial inning found Farrell Cathlamet's twirler for two singles. Nace Grant's hit scored Graham, but there was no other score that inning. Tom Ross occupied the box for Astoria, and neither of the first three men up—McDermott, Hallagh and Brignoni—succeeded in getting beyond the first bag. There was no scoring in the next inning on either side.

A young man named Mitchell played in the right garden for Astoria and in the third inning started fireworks that proved the undoing of the home team. He was the first man up and lined a two-bagger just inside the first base. "Chop" Stockton followed with a single, and then Graham singled and brought in Mitchell, while Abercrombie's single scored "Chop." Grant was the next man up and batted out a two-bagger that scored Graham and Abercrombie. Grant scored on Reagan's single, but the later was thrown out at third. Ross reached first and went to third on Trullinger's single, while Knutson and Mitchell fanned, retiring the side after six runs had been scored. Bellagh scored for Cathlamet in the third, being called safe at first on a very close decision.

Graham, Abercrombie and Grant scored for Astoria in the fourth, but Cathlamet could not safely find Ross. This ended Astoria's scoring, and for the following five innings not a man passed third except Trullinger, who would have scored had it not been that he was twice knocked down by a couger at third.

The fourth, fifth and sixth innings saw the home team struggling hard against a superior nine, but its efforts were vain. In the seventh the Cathlamet aggregation took a brace and two men scored. In the eighth two more runs came home, and in the ninth Farrell scored. McDermott overplayed himself at third and was thrown out at the last named sack.

The Astorians put up an exhibition of ball that was excellent in every respect. At third Grant played faultlessly. In the fourth inning O'Brien batted him a liner that few amateurs could have handled, and every ball that came into his territory was gobbled up in professional style. He also batted like a demon, driving out three two-baggers and a single. Ross pitched a fine game and was grandly supported. Stockton caught him and surprised every one by handling the speedy heavy-weight's curves. Graham put up his usually errorless game at second, while Ryan was a wonder at short. Reagan's game was errorless and it is seldom that better fielding is seen outside a league contest. At first Abercrombie is just the man that the local team has needed for a long time. Trullinger covered the center field in fine style, his running catch of Dufur's long fly in the fourth being one of the prettiest and most telltale plays of the day. Knutson was in the left garden, where the ground was very rough, making fielding extremely difficult. His work was fast, however, and even the unknown Mitchell—who, by the way, is an Astorian—put up a good exhibition.

McDermott caught Farrell and it was not hard to discern that his heart was in the game. Even when things were hopeless he urged his colleagues to greater effort and himself caught splendidly. Farrell pitched a great game after the fourth inning and was well supported. At short Brignoni made several costly errors for Cathlamet, but at that the home team did

Trial Will Be Expensive

Lane and Smith, Alleged Perjurers, a Drain on Taxpayers of County

District Attorney Allen is prepared for the fight of his life when the case of the state against Charles R. Lane, alias John L. Bock, alias John Lane, and Josiah S. Smith, alias John Lane, and also charged with perjury, is called in the court tomorrow. It is understood that the defendants will seek to obtain change of venue, the object being to get further time in which to build up a defense.

Witnesses have been subpoenaed from Seattle, San Francisco, and Portland who will identify both defendants and give evidence in the case. Seattle is particularly anxious to get possession of the defendants long enough to have them explain to the satisfaction of a judge and jury a little matter of $2,000 paid to one John E. E. Myer on a similar proposition, and several other people who have been duped by them. It is said, have their hammers out and will knock with telling effect at the trial tomorrow, or whenever it begins.

It is going to cost the county of Clatsop a large sum of money to convict the men, but District Attorney Allen says that the mystery of the movable kneecap, so valuable to the man of many aliases, will, he feels certain, be solved to the eminent satisfaction of all concerned and in the saving of at least $2,000 to the city of Astoria. Lane is said to be a former inmate of the California penitentiary, where he served a term for grand larceny. Smith is the business manager of the partnership, acting the part of the silent partner. Despite the fact that he has always been the figure in the background in the operations of Lane, he will be tried first.

Lane, it is alleged, is the man who sued the City of Astoria, under the name of John L. Bock, for damages for injuries alleged to have been received by him on a defective sidewalk on Duane St. The accident he alleged, occurred on August 21, 1900. Smith was his star witness at the trial, testifying that he was actually present with Bock when he was precipitated below the level of the sidewalk. The result of the trial, as previously stated in the Morning Astorian, was a verdict and judgment in the sum of $2,500, and after some fortunate delay in the matter of payment a compromise on a basis of $2,000 was about to be negotiated.

The timely arrival of information to the District Attorney that the men were impostors saved the city just that sum, and resulted in the arrest of both men.

One phase of the case was introduced in the circuit court yesterday when motion was made by City Attorney Smith to file amended motion for new trial of John L. Bock vs City of Astoria, the idea being to bring out facts not yet developed.
